To know New Orleans, one must first understand its language. A starting place for both is the city's vast French Market, home to countless food. crafts and clothing vendors. Marketing manager John Marc Sharpe is guick to point out that the market is not a "microcosm" of the city, but rather a gumbo. A gumbo is made up from a dash of french heritage, a smidge of Americana, and most importantly, a willingness to let all ingredients, no matter how disparate, shine as part of a greater whole.

The second local expression born from the market is lagniappe, meaning a little something extra. Born from the long-ago days when poor locals could count on keeping the canvas sack that their food came in, it now stands for New Orleans residents' unfailing ability to go above and beyond their obligations in showing visitors an extra-special time.

Big Easy is an incredible The destination for gay tourists. Southern Decadence and Mardi Gras are unparalleled national LGBT party destinations and the cluster of gay bars on Bourbon Street welcomes visitors with open arms and ice cold beers. But, true to form, New Orleans also offers something more.

The local LGBT population is so integrated into the city that anything can turn into a queer night out. The revelry of the French Quarter, the local color of Magazine Street, the live music of Marigny — all are waiting for visitors new and old, debauched or dignified, foodie or pleasure seeker, to jump in the gumbo and take a bite.

Gay NOLA... At A Glance

Don't waste your time in New Orleans looking for the gay neighborhood. Most of the city functions as a "gay neighborhood." The queer NOLA visitor has a unique opportunity to simply explore the city, in all its gay and gay-friendly glory, without having to relegate themselves to one small area or mindset. Below are some of the best and friendliest attractions that The Big Easy has to offer.

SHOPPING

Your best bets for shopping in New Orleans are clustered along two streets: Royal Street in the French

GETTING THERE: Louis Armstrong Airport serves frequent flights from major airports. The airport runs an affordable and reliable twoway shuttle to your hotel. Driving visitors can easily motor to New Orleans from many nearby Southern cities.

GETTING AROUND: The St. Charles Street Car line has been called one of the most beautiful rides in the western world. Catch it on Canal St. and ride through the Garden District to Carrollton. Or for a trip down Magazine Street and its shops, take the 11 bus. Going to Metarie? Take the Jefferson Transit E-4 bus.

GETTING A CAB: The city has many reliable cab companies like Checker-Yellow (504-943-2411) or Coleman Cab Co. (504-586-0222). Visit NewOrleansOnline.com for an extensive directory.

TIP: New Orleans weather is lukewarm at its coldest and sweltering at its hottest. Dress accordingly.

Quarter and Magazine Street, which runs through the Garden and the Uptown Districts.

Royal Street's best for high budgets and expensive tastes. You can buy Anne Rice-worthy Gothic home decor at Whisnant Gallery. Vintage 329 is an autograph-hound's dream, as you can pick up signed Hemingway hardcovers or a copy of The Rolling Stones' "Sticky Fingers" John Hancocks from every band member and Andy Warhol. The Shop is an art-gallery with cutting edge paintings, including a series by Cartoon Network character designer Mark Bodnar.

For those with more quotidian tastes and lower budgets, Magazine Street is a shopper's dream. The Buffalo Exchange features the city's best collection of vintage and high-design t-shirts, the Magazine Antique Mall can provide hours of careful treasure hunting and the No Fleas Market, a vintage store benefitting local animal charities, offers the rare chance to spend money on yourself for the sake of NOLA's furry friends.

BARS

Like having fun at gay bars? Of course you do. New Orleans chief party street, Bourbon, offers equal opportunity debacuhery. You can start on the west end, where the straight people are, and get your liver working early with a famously (and famously oversized) Hurricane cocktail before ioining other members of the gueer

Down the street, at St. Annes, is the nexus of NOLA's gay universe. The one-two punch of Bourbon Parade and Oz, located across the street from each other on the same corner, offer a little something for everyone, as the bars are coed, mixed-age, transfriendly and — most importantly - quite fun. Sunday is sing-along night at Bourbon Parade, so brush up on your Dolly before you get there. Nearby Rawhide provides one's daily dosage of raunch, so don't bring your parents.

Where Can I Party?

CAFÉ LAFITTE IN EXILE 901 Bourbon St. Try CAFÉ LAFITTE. the oldest continuously operating gay bar in the U.S. or visit Lafitte's Blacksmith Shop. Both are big gay hangouts with lots happening, especially during Decadence.

ARTS + CULTURE

In New Orleans, cultural history runs deeper than a fishbowl full of beer. The city nurtured queer vanguard writers Tennessee Williams and Truman Capote. It inspired Anne Rice's vampires and gave rise to Mad Men's Bryan "Salvatore" Batt. Ellen Degeneres even had her awards show debut as emcee of the New Orleans Mr. and Ms Gay Pride in 1981.

For arts, visit the New Orleans Museum of Art or the Ogden Museum of Southern Art. New Orleans has also had a resurgence of performing arts with the reopening of the Mahalia Jackson Theatre, now featuring performances of the New Orleans Opera, the Louisiana Philharmonic Orchestra, and a variety of other entertainment. In early September, New Orleans hosts Culture Collision, a city-wide arts festival that includes museums, dance, theater, music, and more.

SHOPPING

New Orleans was voted #1 for shopping by Travel and Leisure magazine. For galleries, gifts, and antiques, take a stroll down Royal Street in the French Quarter. Stop in at Rodrigue, painter of the famous New Orleans Blue Dogs, or find exotic gifts and collectables at the Brass Monkey.

On Magazine Street, a 12 mile stretch of shops, residences and cafes, try Vom Fass gourmet shop. For fashion, go to the Shops at Canal Place and the Lakeside Shopping Center. Or, take a quick trip to Dunleith Designs for antique furniture on historic Old Metarie Road.

Where Can L Read?

FAUBOURG MARIGNY ART AND BOOKS

600 Frenchmen St.

This long-standing bookstore carries a selection of titles specializing in works by celebrated local gay authors. It has been the Big Easy gay hub for decades.

DINING

You'll see great sights in New Orleans, but never the bottom of your plate. Whether it's your first or fortieth visit, here are a few mustvisits for the travelling gourmand.

For upscale, try Antoine's Oysters Rockefeller or Arnaud's Oysters Bienville. Visit SoBou, sister restaurant to Commander's Palace. Budget conscious? Pick up a po' boy at Daisy Dukes or practically any local eatery or corner bar.

Partying all night in NOLA? Get a late night bite at La Peniche in the Marigny or Clover Grill in the Quarter. The next day, cure your hangover with a bloody Mary brunch at the Court of Two Sisters.

HISTORY

John Kennedy O'Toole could hardly think of an epic yarn that would be more interesting than New Orleans. The city was founded by a Frenchman in 1718 and spent almost forty years in Spanish rule before its acquisition in the Louisiana Purchase. And that's only the first 65 years. A history buff could easily kill a week in New Orleans trying to hear a fraction of her stories.

Visit the St. Louis Number One Cemetery and see the tomb of Voodoo gueen Marie Laveau. Mark X on her grave to provide fresh gris-gris charm. Sprawling Louis Armstrong Park is the former site of Storyville, a historic, defunct red-light district. Several miles east of the Quarter is the Chalmette battlefield where a ragtag militia defeated the British and ended the War of 1812.

TOURS

You can see the city with a culinary, heritage, plantation, French Quarter, or even horse and buggy tour. Couples looking for some hand-holding time can check out the numerous local companies who offer romance tours of New Orleans. For a comprehensive list, visit NewOrleansOnline.com

WORK IT

Rubvfruit Junale is the premiere lesbian club in the Big Easy. Nestled on Decatur Street, the three-story club gets busy on late nights and weekends with burlesque shows, dancing, live music, and plenty of Sapphic action. There's even a balcony overlooking the Quarter.

PARK IT

Get back to nature with a walk among centuries-old oaks in City Park or picnic in Woldenberg Park with stunning views of the Mighty Mississippi. You even stroll through Audubon Park or take a bike ride along the levee. Just 30 minutes outside of the city is Jean Lafitte National Park, a treasure trove of ecological wonders amid Louisiana's swamps, forests, and marshlands with no shortage of ways to get your hands dirty.

CHEER IT

Show the Saints some during a tailgate party outside the Superdome where meeting friends is a breeze. Even if you can't get your hands on a prized black-and-golden ticket, just don the team colors and vou'll eniov lots of libations and celebrations that continue well after kickoff

FIX IT

While the city has certainly bounced back after Katrina, there's still plenty of good work to do. Lend a hand with Emergency Communities. Ground Common Relief. Relief Habitat Spark, for Humanity and Katrina Krewe Who knows? You mav catch a glimpse of Brad and Angelina at one of the housing projects they've designed in the Ninth Ward.

WHERE the OLD WORLD MEETS the NEW SCAN FOR RESTAURANTS. SHOPS AND SPECIAL EVENTS IN THE FRENCH MARKET

For 200 years, the French Market has been a mustsee destination in the Quarter. It's where on six lively blocks, shopping, and food collide with entertainment and culture on the banks of Mississippi. What began as a Native American trading post has blossomed into a popular and very gay-friendly destination yearround. Follow the aromas of fresh coffee beans and savory Creole herbs and spices to this. America's oldest public market.

Café du Monde, famous for its powdery beignets and chickory-brewed coffee, makes its home here on a pedestrian plaza, called Dutch Alley, where fair-weather flea markets make it a major shopping attraction. You never know what you may find from a diverse collection of vendors. And after a late night hitting the bars, nothing beats a fresh-from-the-oven donut (the café's open 24 hours a day).

Also be on the lookout for special events at the French Market, including live music, races, and festivals. This quintessentially New Orleans hot spot is also the perfect place to pick up locally made clothing, jewelry, and art. You'll even find take-home-worthy Mardi Gras masks and beads for some authentic Louisiana revelry just in time for Southern Decadence.

The first suburb of New Orleans, Metairie was built on the natural raised banks of a bayou along which a trail ran into New Orleans. This Metairie Ridge was ideal for farming and the name Metairie in French refers to small, leased farm holdings. Today the Road, also known as Old Metairie, winds along the old trail through upscale shopping centers, boutiques, restaurants, and more. Browse three centuries of antiques at Dunleith Designs or shop custom made jewelry at Boudreaux's. Visit Metairie's two major retail shopping outlets, the Lakeside Shopping Center and Clearview Mall. Stop for lunch at Acme Oyster House or take in a show at the Jefferson Performing Arts Center, now in its 35th season.

Street and fortify yourself with a drink at mainstay gay bar The Golden Lantern before leaving the French Quarter.

After you cross Esplanade into Marigny you should start with Igor's Checkpoint Charlie, a bar/grill/laundromatte/game room with edgy clientelle and the most addictive pinball machine in the western hemisphere. From there head north to Vaso and relax with a beer in front of the bar's giant, mesmerizing wall-mounted fish tank. Once you're fully rested you can finish up down the block at Maison. Sunday nights feature no cover and a searing brass band whose cover of "American Boy" would make Estelle retire in defeat.
